

Decoma design

Founded in 1986 by Luigi Mascheroni, Decoma Design is a project development and engineering company for industrial products. Decoma Design projects are developed from the creative synergy between the defining elements of products, creating a clear identity and innovation aesthetic. This is achieved by respecting the functionality of a product, from the concept to the choice of materials, through to the production process, the costing and security of the operation. Decoma Design collaborates with leading Italian and international brands from various industries. Acknowledgement and reviews in specialist publications show the success they have achieved. The company also work with architecture projects, interiors and corporate design. Decoma Design is based in Milan, in the Brianza district. In 2010 he designed the Solferino wardrobe for Boffi.
